| Thesis Summary | As more than 50% of world's population currently lives in cities, studies are being done to increase their capacity to manage any possible threats that may develop and have an influence on human social, environmental, and other factors. The city of Irbid in northern Jordan was the case study of the thesis. The process of this study provided a holistic understanding for the giving context with correlation with space, place, and place creation studies and their relation with QOL and QOE. Hereafter analysis & strategies contained social, environmental, physical, and economical approaches, it is important to mention that the vision of applying those approaches has a deep and long term influence on the whole social structure on the giving context. Understanding social issues and promoting healthy social change are goals of creative process of the social design of this study. As a result, it was all about the accumulated layers that start from theoretical knowledge and finally reaching conceptual designing with a wide scale of understanding regardless of the designing benefits. Main approaches of the study were research methodology, design methodology, framework, and the theory that established in this study. |
